Christmas Stories Are Presented for Sorosis

LANGHORNE, Dec. 3.—Mrs. Clarence Smith, of Wyndmoore, a past chairman of the Storytellers League of Pennsylvania, provided a portion of the entertainment at the meeting of Langhorne Sorosis yesterday afternoon in the library.

Mrs. Smith, introduces by Mrs. Harry Friedrich who had charge of the afternoon program, presented a short history of the Storytellers League, telling of its founding in Knoxville, Tenn., in 1933, by a group of people attending Summer School who enjoyed gathering in the evening to tell and hear stories. The aims are to encourage the learning of the good and beautiful in literature.

Mrs. Smith told four lovely stories: "How the lights came to be on the Christmas Tree," "Christ's first Birthday" (Sawyer), "Christ is born Again" (Eric T. Kelly), and "The Christmas Promise" (Sawyer).

Forty women were present for the program. Vocal numbers were provided by Miss Madeline Rumpf, her offerings being "Donna Donna" (from Herbert's "Irene"), "Stars with Golden Feet are Wandering," and "Through the Years." Mrs. Friedrich took charge of the program in the absence of Mrs. James B. Rudhart.

Mrs. Lester Ranson presided at the business meeting. Mrs. Elmer Pickett announced that the committee in charge had realized $44 on the bake sale which preceded the last meeting. She also presented a petition which Frederick Libby, a recent speaker before Sorosis, had left for those who so desired to sign. The petition urged Congress to seek the earliest possible peace, and to formulate specific proposals for peace and harmony.

TOMORROW'S WORLD MUST BE BUILT ON LOVE

Rev. L. J. Pitt, Pastor of Trenton Church, Addresses
Bristol Rotarians

TELLS WHAT IS NEEDED

"Tomorrow's world must be built on love, compassion; the homely things of life, justice and right," the Rev. Lawrence J. Pitt, pastor of the State Street M. E. Church, Trenton, told Bristol Rotarians when he spoke at the weekly meeting in the Elks Home yesterday afternoon.

The Rev. Pitt, who also aids the program at the Pennington Seminary, spoke on the subject, "Looking Ahead."

"After the war is over a lot of people are going to think any kind of world is better than that in which we live today," the Rev. Pitt said.

"But we do not need a new world. The world of tomorrow must be built out of the same materials that we have today, but they must be differently arranged. We must rearrange our value of things."

"Our scale of values today is built on prejudices and hate . . . our world of tomorrow must be built on love and compassion . . . the homely things of life . . . justice and right."

"We must have toleration. There is not too much of it abroad today. There is a cleavage between the groups in the world. We must build our welfare on co-operation . . . on those things in which we all agree."

"And we must develop an intelligent hatred. We must not build a hatred which is directed at persons, but at some of the false things which they believe. We must ruthlessly attempt to destroy those false beliefs. Out of this will come toleration which will make a better world."

Plotted Roosevelt's Assassination

Detroit—Secret Service agents today disclosed for the first time a plot by an apparently insane Pontiac, Mich., man to assassinate President Roosevelt.

The agents revealed that Walter Best, 40, was captured near the White House Nov. 13 "while apparently acquainting himself with the layout." A gun was found in a Washington hotel where he lived for two weeks mapping out the plot, they said.

Mrs. Best, it was learned, received a letter from her husband in which he wrote he "was going to get rid of Roosevelt." Mrs. Best immediately notified authorities.

A Washington psychiatrist found Best to be "mentally deranged." No criminal action will be taken, it was learned. Best is in a Washington hospital until legal steps are taken to commit him to a state institution in Michigan.

TARGETS FOR PEACE

High levels of productivity are urged by the Committee for Economic Development, a nation-wide organization of business men that is striving to keep American enterprise free. The goal is jobs for 55,000,000 persons after the war—a target for peace.

In 1940, approximately 46,000,000 persons were employed by industry. This number gave the nation good living standards and a fair economic level. Since then, 10,000,000 men and women have been absorbed by the armed forces, of whom nearly 1,000,000 already have been returned to civilian life.

But the problem is not merely to find civilian jobs for demobilized members of the armed forces. It calls for satisfying the job desires of millions who have been working in war industries and wish to continue after the war at gainful employment. This accounts for the estimate of the CED that 55,000,000 jobs will be required to maintain a satisfactory postwar economy.

The target for peace—and for a free America—is the productive employment of every person not otherwise provided with an income on which to live. Whatever this number is, American enterprise can go far toward providing the jobs if the federal government will keep out of the way.

OIL LAND BOOM

In the absence of widespread exploration for oil and development of promising properties, it appears that much of the proved oil land of the country is passing into the control of the major oil companies. Most large companies do not produce enough crude to keep their refineries operating at capacity to meet war demands. They are buying the oil in the ground wherever they can.

This has made a seller's market in oil lands. In East Texas recent sales have been at prices equivalent to $1 or $1.25 a barrel for the oil that is estimated to be in the ground. Normally such offers range from 15 cents to 50 cents for unproduced oil.

Observers in the industry believe these purchases indicate that before long oil prices will go up. The OPA ceiling of $1.25 per barrel has been maintained, but with purchases of undeveloped oil at or near that ceiling, it seems inevitable that the ceiling will be broken through.

In any case, the prices oil properties are commanding should serve as a spur to wild-cattling as soon as independent operators can command manpower and the materials. The demand for oil in the postwar years promises to eclipse anything seen in the pre-Hitler days.

OPA has ruled a farmer may slaughter his own meat if he has owned the animal sixty days, but by that time he may want to keep it for a pet.

Nothing can be termed an antique unless it is 75 years old, OPA has ruled. This will be good news to the family car.

and Communistic press and the CIO lobbyists. Upon these forces the Roosevelt fourth-term movement depends heavily for its strength. Except for pressure from them the Administration would have little interest in the repeal proposal—and everybody knows it. The contention of the opposition is that the poll tax does not discriminate against the Negro in that it applies to whites as well as blacks and that its repeal in the eight States will not enfranchise any more Negroes than vote today.

THE FACT is that some of the leading Senators who oppose the repeal do not favor the poll tax at all. Rather, they would welcome its abolition but they insist that this be achieved by constitutional means—either by action of the States or by a constitutional amendment. And they justifiably assert that the issue is of concern to every State and every citizen; that if the Federal Government can take away this right to prescribe the qualifications of their voters, vested solely in the States by the Constitution, it can take away any and all other rights. Surrender this right and the States will have completely lost their independence and function only in directions permitted by the Federal authority. Actually, the fight against this bill is of the very greatest concern to every person who wishes to preserve the American form of government.

WITH REGARD to the soldiers vote bill, the same principle of the Constitution is attacked by its New Deal sponsors. What they originally sought was to sweep aside all State legislation laws and simply accept the word of every soldier without any checkup as to where he lived or his qualification to vote in that place. Under this bill, as at first presented, any man in uniform, here or abroad, over 21 years old, would be handed a ballot and his vote counted in the State where he said he lived. This would enfranchise a great many thousands of individuals who never voted before, who never contemplated voting, who never registered and could not meet the voting qualifications of the State in which they lived. But, if the State officials refuse to count the votes of such persons, the whole vote of the State could be thrown out by Congress.

THERE ARE Republican as well as Democratic Senators who regard these provisions as not only unconstitutional but bad. It may be that by the time this piece is printed they will have succeeded in correcting some of the bill's most obnoxious features. There is general recognition that the ten million voters affected may determine the election. There is also recognition that as originally drawn it gave advantages to the Administration candidate, expected to be Mr. Roosevelt, which he should not have. Yet, those who strove to amend the bill are subjected to the unfair charge that they do not want the soldiers to vote.

UNDER THESE conditions, it takes real courage to speak out against this bill—particularly from Senators who come up for election next year. The fact is that the purpose of each of these bills is thoroughly sound. Their avowed objective is one upon which almost unanimous agreement could be had. But the methods by which it is proposed to reach their goals cannot be reconciled with a sense of fairness and dangerously disregard the principles of American government. There is no expectation that the poll tax bill will pass at this session, but the soldier vote bill, which makes it all the more important that it should be amended so that partisan advantage be eliminated, fair administration assured and the fundamental rights of the States

Col. Kearby Always Found in Combat

hates desks, conferences, papers, signatures and typewriters. But because his name is Col. Neil Kearby and because he has become in three short months one of the outstanding pursuit leaders in the history of the Pacific war, it is reasonable to assume that he will remain in his post as deputy fighter commander with little difficulty for some considerable period.

More than just being an able combat leader, however, more than being the individual who destroyed six Japanese fighters over Wewak in a single scrap to establish a new western Pacific record, Neil Kearby's talents and reputation spring from another and more important source. In those same three short months he established anew the single-engine fighter as the primary pursuit weapon in this vast command.

Until the Messrs. Kearby and Company—company being Thunderbolt fighters—arrived on the New Guinea scene, the Lightning reigned unchallenged over jungle skies.

In 12 weeks of combat—proceeding with what amounted to steamroller enthusiasm—Kearby and his Thunderbolt team destroyed 66 Japanese fighters for the loss of only two of their own aircraft in combat.

And that, he promises, is only the beginning.

"I'll probably be called insane," he remarks without any visible displeasure at the prospect, "but the day will come when we can destroy 50 Jap fighters for the loss of only one of our airplanes. Our tactics are steadily improving; our pilots are daily becoming more skilled. If an outfit of fliers brand new to combat—as ours were—can set a record of 33 to 1, why 50 should be easy.

"It will be too, though we'll regret losing one."

Tactics and strategy are decided by Wurtsmith and Kearby at staff conferences which begin at 11 o'clock at night and are apt to end over coffee and eggs at dawn.

These conferences embrace countless telephone calls and even personal visits.

They may be destructive to the nerves of harried staffs but they're accomplishing the results Wurtsmith wants most: flexible, constantly-alert battle plans which outguess the Nip at every turn. It was at one of these conferences that Wurtsmith conceived the close cover method of protection of bombers which was unheard of in aerial warfare; fighters would deliberately place themselves at an extreme tactical disadvantage by descending to attack bomber levels.

There were those who said it wouldn't work—fighters would be lost in droves. Wurtsmith said it would. It did. And nothing proved it more conclusively than at Rabaul November 2nd, when not one American bomber was lost to enemy fighters despite interception by 150 Jap warplanes.

As Wurtsmith forecast it would, American pilots simply forced the Nip to fight on their terms—at low level—or not fight at all.

Meanwhile Allied bases which have and are springing up with increased impetus to form an air cordon around Rabaul and Wewak have placed American fighter pilots in their most advantageous position since the Pacific war began.

The air warning services established along the most modern lines and at the most advanced bases are tipping off Jap counter air thrusts and a chain of airdromes has been welded which renders almost impregnable those anchorages and key bases on which MacArthur's entire strategy is predicated. In the fighters' phase at least, that security has developed because Wurtsmith said it could be done and Kearby and scores of other skilled young American fliers have proven it could be done.

Gather 1900 Garments For Guild Exhibition

world if we didn't have something lovely to think about, such as the making and gathering in of these garments, what would we do?"

Mrs. Wilson, the speaker for the day, advocated the organization of a junior branch and also of a Labrador branch of the guild, telling of the especial need for warm clothing among the very poor people in Labrador. This particular ingathering occurs in the spring. Although the needs for clothing in individual families is not as great as at periods when employment is not high, Mrs. Wilson reminded that institutions and hospitals are constantly in need of the new garments provided by the guilds, and depend on the help of that organization. She spoke of the great need through the mountainous region of the south and among illiterate groups in many areas.

Citing a case with which she had had contact, the speaker told of two small boys, brothers, who took turns attending school as they had but one blouse between them. The boys could scarcely believe that they had not only one whole suit apiece, but two each, when the Needlework Guild learned of the need.

"A good way to spread the Guild work is to have more members become directors," she stated. "That means that instead of receiving two garments you will receive 22." The speaker congratulated the women of this area on the large number of garments of fine quality, and told of the need, ever present, of garments for men and school children in poor families who must leave their homes each day for their work and studies.

Mrs. Roland Quinn informed the Bristol Branch that activities of the Edgely sewing group will be dedicated in the future to the memory of Mrs. William Smyrl, a past president of the group of workers when they were an organized guild. The Edgely group sews an entire day each week.

are the following: William H. Fetter, Trenton, N. J.; Arlington P. Myers, Doylestown; and G. Edward Otto, of Morrisville.

When the board of directors met for reorganization the following were re-named for another year: President, Mr. Fechtenburg; first vice president, Charles J. Hupp, Doylestown; 2nd vice president, Mr. Rossiter; secretary, Otto Grupp, Jr., Croydon; treasurer, Edward R. Kirk, Wycombe, he having served in this capacity since the county board was formulated.

The real estate board is working on a chart which is to be sent to all persons interested in the county, said chart presenting information regarding taxes, assessments, etc. The realtors feel this chart will offer fine information for reference in many cases. The tax committee is also busy endeavoring to standardize tax notices in the county.

A discussion on "Post War Planning" was in charge of the post war planning committee headed by Charles H. Heyer. The group is interested in plans and anticipating problems that will arise in connection with real estate after the war, and is studying the problems from local and national standpoints.

C. Burnley White, of Cornwells Heights, spoke to the group on the subject "Big Opportunities of Small Business Men." his address being exceptionally well received. President Judge of Bucks County Courts, Hiram H. Keller, another guest, spoke briefly of the new indexing system at the offices of the Recorder of Deeds and the Register of Wills here, these being of great aid to realtors, tax companies and any others in making of searches, etc.

Fines Totaling $2,150 Imposed on Defendants In Bucks Liquor Cases interest," commented Judge Keller. "We have known for some time the type of place that you were operating at Pleasant Valley. If the truth were known you would have the additional charge of operating and maintaining a bawdy house against you. And you, Mrs. Cressman, are just as bad as your husband. Both of you were grossly negligent of the duties of a licensee. I'm sorry that I cannot give you a stiffer sentence."

During the hearing Judge Keller asked Miss Reihman, who said she worked at the place without wages, how she made a living. She stated that her brother gave her money on some occasions. She denied that she ever entertained men at Cressman's Tavern.

Cressman did not take the witness stand himself.

"You are still young and it may not be too late for you to save yourself," Judge Keller told Miss Reihman. "But you had better forget the type of life that you have been living."

"And as to you, Miss Campbell, although there is no charge against you, you too had better seek some decent and respectable type of employment."

Liquor Control Agent Meyers, who gathered the evidence against the place, informed the Court that a citation is pending before the State Board regarding the revocation of the Cressman license.

On a number of other counts against the Cressmans, sentence was suspended.

Anthony Tolomeo, 34, of 1342 South 34th street, and Anthony Corsey, 28, 1523 South 32nd street, both of Philadelphia, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Boyer to a charge of illegal possession and transportation of 53 cases of Wilson Rye Whiskey in Morrisville after a truck containing the whiskey had been stopped by State Police, Liquor Control Agents and officers of the Alcohol Tax Unit.

Tolomeo, the driver of the truck, related a fantastic story about being hired by some unknown man in Philadelphia to drive to New York and "get a load," and to return it to some address in Philadelphia where he was to leave it. It was the time-worn explanation of the old bootleg days, slightly streamlined and returned to court for a 1943 session.

Tolomeo was sentenced to pay the costs and fines aggregating $600 or serve six months in the county prison.

Corsey, who was summoned from Philadelphia as an automobile mechanic to repair the broken down whiskey truck near Trenton, was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs or serve one to three months in the county prison.

The seized whiskey, Tolomeo said, was loaded in New York City out of a large van while he was at lunch. Tolomeo said that he had no idea what was in the truck, that it might have been a load of milk, for all he knew.

Tolomeo said that all he knew was that he was to drive a truck to a certain street corner in New York City and there he met a fellow who led the way to the big van. All the serial numbers on the whiskey cases had been removed when the load was seized. None of the bottles contained Pennsylvania State tax stamps, and the entire cargo was seized and taken to the Bucks County Prison. It was real Wilson whiskey, and not an imitation product.

"We are satisfied that you, Tolomeo, knew what you were hauling back from New York," Judge Boyer commented in pronouncing sentence. "Your story is ridiculous, just as you say, you might have been hauling a load of milk. You are one of those engaged in helping to break the liquor laws for the 'higher up' who knows nothing, sees nothing and tells nothing."

"And you, Corsey, probably fell for a chance to earn some extra money by repairing a truck, but you certainly must have realized that something was wrong about the whole transaction."

SGT. PROUD OF JOB

By Charles A. Smith
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)
U. S. BOMBER FIELD. Somewhere in England, Dec. 3—(INS)—The room was long, narrow, and very lofty. There was a mothball smell reminiscent of a fur-store or a clothes closet.

From the roof dangled a half dozen or so white silk objects, like huge, deflated barrage balloons.

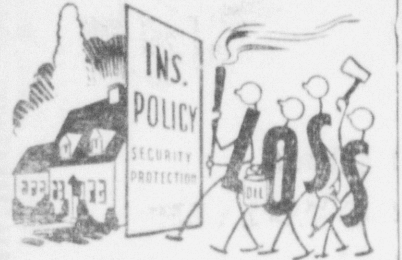

I realized I had stumbled into the parachute room on this American medium bomber field, into a scene of cathedral-like calm as compared to the bustle and noise elsewhere.

Working away at a long bench which ran almost the entire length of the room was Sgt. Benjamin E. Sloppy, of Lewis Run, Pa., parachute repair man and anxious to let the world know that he holds a very important ground job in the U. S. Eighth Air Force.

With eleven other men in this "check and repair" section, Sgt. Sloppy examines every chute as it comes in, repairs and repacks them when they have been used, periodically opens up, dances, and checks every chute on the drome—"just in case." For they take no chances in the U. S. Army Air Corps.

And he told me they had their biggest thrill a few days back when a couple of men spilled out of one of the field's B-26's and came safely to earth, unharmed, hanging on to parachutes issued from that room.

He took me across to another building nearby and we met Cpl. Walter Stockman, of Greenlaw, L. I. N. Y., who explained to me that each squadron is represented

In the check and repair depot, where the main business in life is to check all the chutes and life-rafts carried by the various air crews.

"We've all been with this group since it left the United States," Stockman explained, "and you can bet everything is done to keep all this safety equipment up-to-date, for we are pretty proud of these boys who fly."

We went over and took a look at one of the one-man rubber life-rafts now carried by all bomber men. It goes into a pack 18 inches square, and when it is opened out it is revealed to be a sizeable yellow raft, equipped with a mast which can be used as a fishing pole, a red sail, a sea anchor, food and water, and other "fixes."

"It's got everything except running water and central heating," said Sgt. Sloppy, "and we think it's pretty good."

And as we left the building we ran into T/Sgt. Ernest P. Thomas, of Yazoo City, Miss., and learned just a little more about the vast ground organization of the 8th Air Force.

For Sgt. Thomas is in charge of transportation on this field. He has under his care 150 vehicles from five-ton trucks to quarter-ton jeeps piling up a mileage estimated at 25,000 miles a month. And he praised the good mechanics and the good drivers of the 8th Air Force when he said the damage roll is pretty small "considering."

The sergeant has a garage business and log-tracking outfit back there in Yazoo City. Right now his sister Marguerite is running it for him, and he's sent back $3,900 in war bonds in the last six months to be used to extend his business when it's over, over here.

For Fur Accessories

Be sure to see the smart fur accessories which are four-star gift suggestions this Christmas! Delight too in the fact that you don't have to pay a young fortune for them, so whether you plan to treat yourself or surprise someone you particularly like, you can still afford them and stay within your wartime budget. Take thrifty pride too in the fact that these are gifts that will give seasons of warm smart wear, and as we all know, their versatility is endless. A fur muff can work fashion magic when worn with a untrimmed winter suit or coat. As for fur scarfs they add the luxury touch to untrimmed coats, suits and dresses, definitely gifts that will be prized for four seasons of the year. Fur collars are another splendid gift suggestion and transform an untrimmed coat or suit into something really special! Both flat and long-haired furs are noted in these accessories, all underscored for long smart wear!

Big Hand for Fur Gloves
Warm her hands, warm her heart—surprise her with fur gloves this Christmas! Dramatically smart to see as they are cozy to wear, match hers to her fur coat. Noted in soft suede, they feature fur-trimmed cuffs of persian, beaver and spotted furs as well as many others, or surprise her with a fur-trimmed belt or fur-trimmed bow tie.

It's Easy To Sew

Gifts of Cotton

If you're nimble with a needle (and who isn't these days)—plan now some of your gifts of crisp fresh cotton! Besides being thrifty and patriotic, it will give your gift the extra personal touch that makes it doubly appreciated. Among the easy-to-make cotton wearables are gay cotton tea aprons for hostess duty. Make yours with an extra wide waist-band for snug charm. These require precious little fabric—and precious little sewing time, too! Another "quickie" cotton fashion to sew is the brunch coat and in colorful cottons these make pretty practical gifts. Pinafores, too, top favorites with American women for pantry and parlor, are easy to make, a joy to receive. Don't overlook shirts and dinnin' skirts either—these are wonderful gifts for teen-age and college girls! Poster-bright stripes of vivid floral prints are super for these cotton fashions for young America. And speaking of young America, there are scores of easy to make gifts for them! For the new-born baby, a dainty little dress or gettundee is really child's play to make. And for kindergartners, a bright little cotton or pinafore would make a perfect gift—and really a breeze to sew!

Helpful Sewing Hints

Even if you're an amateur sewer, don't hesitate a second to make some of your own gifts. Hie yourself down to the local stores and visit the pattern department. They'll show you quickly and clearly how really very easy it is to cut and follow a pattern and they'll give you lots of professional sewing hints to make your job easier, make your handiwork a big success. They've a wide and wonderful cotton crop from which to choose and prices are sweet and low. So start now—sew gifts of cotton for a real Merry Christmas!

LOTTERY WINNER

HEADQUARTERS, Panama Canal Department—(INS)—Staff Sergeant Peter J. Malone, with the Sixth Air Force in the Caribbean, won a neat $5,000 in the Panamanian lottery with a $2.50 investment in tickets. Everyone in his outfit had varied and bright ideas about spending it but so did Sergeant Malone. He put the whole works in war bonds.

Malone is also putting $100 a month from his salary into bonds against the day when he will return to his Arizona ranch.

COOKING IN WATER
MEANS SIMMER, NEVER BOIL

Meat rationing makes it necessary for the homemaker to learn ways for preparing less well known cuts as well as new ways to add variety and make familiar meat cuts go further. Many of the lesser known cuts are best cooked by one of the moist heat cookery methods—in water.

Cooking in water makes the meat tender and is recommended for large cuts including beef neck, shank, heel of round, plate, brisket, and short ribs; cured or corned rump, plate, brisket and tongue; cured pork, spareribs; veal neck and shank; and stews—beef, lamb or veal.

More often the large cuts cooked in water are cured cuts instead of fresh ones. Regardless of the cut the general directions for preparation are the same.

The meat is seasoned, unless it has been cured, and browned on all sides in fat or hot lard. Corned or smoked cuts which already have a definite flavor are better when not browned. The flavor developed by browning is very desirable for fresh brisket and for stews. The gravy for stews is more flavorful if the meat has been browned.

Add water to cover the meat, cover the kettle, and cook just below the boiling point (simmer) until tender. (If the meat is allowed to boil it is less tender and will not hold together when sliced.)

Cooking time for large cuts and stews depends on the size and shape of the meat and the kind of cure. The time for cooking recommended by the National Live Stock and Meat Board allows 40-50 minutes per pound or a total of 3-4 hours for corned or large fresh beef cuts; 1½ to 2½ hours for backbone and short ribs; 45 minutes per pound for smoked picnic shoulder; 20-30 minutes per pound for tendered ham shanks or butt ends; 1½ to 2½ hours for beef stews, depending on the size of the pieces; and 1½ to 2 hours for lamb and veal stews.

SPORTSMEN'S
BRIEFS

By JOE ELBERSON

No bucks reported killed yet by local deer hunters, but before the season closes on the 11th of this month we'll probably see some brought back. A number of men from this area have gone deer hunting in many sections of the State.

State officials estimated that 150,000 gunners were in the field on Monday, opening day. Below zero weather has greeted hunters in the Poconos section. Some snow has also been reported and this may aid in tracking the deer.

Seen last Sunday morning along the Canal in Grundy's Park... four fishermen angling for pickerel through a thin layer of ice which had collected along the shores. The season is over for bass and pickerel now. You'll have the rest of the winter to get your tackle ready for next season. Better take good care of it because it may be hard to replace those rusty hooks and other items of tackle.

The 1943 trapping season on skunks, minks and otters opened the 10th of last month and will extend to January 31 of next year.

Game Commission officials have urged trappers to save as much fat from fur-bearing animals as possible. Fats are needed for making explosives, and last year through the combined efforts of trappers, fur dealers and rendering plants approximately 94 tons were saved in Pennsylvania.

Skunks particularly are rich in fat, and if care is taken when skinning them a great deal of it can be saved. Take my advice and be really careful. I remember the last time that I wasn't!

Other fur-bearing animal seasons include muskrats, by traps only, from December 1 to January 31, and beavers, also by traps only, from February 15 to February 19. There is no limit on the number of minks, muskrats and muskrats that may be taken in a season.

Flight ducks on their annual trips southward are just beginning to move in volume... and the Pennsylvania season is just about over (today is the last). Last year local duck hunters were able to hunt well into the month of December, but the Commonwealth was placed in a new zone this season and consequently the season, which began sooner, also ends sooner.

If you want to enjoy the best duck hunting that this immediate section affords (and that is the next three weeks) you'll have to buy a New Jersey non-resident license and hunt the Jersey side of the Delaware. (New Jersey is in another zone and the season there runs almost to Christmas).

No meeting of the Bristol Fish & Game Protective Association this month. The next meeting will be held on January 11, 1944. A big program is now being arranged for this meeting, including some outstanding sport movies.

Vince McPeak, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent McPeak, 605 Cedar street, has been selected as one of the outstanding fullbacks in the scholastic ranks of Philadelphia. McPeak played fullback with the St. Joseph's High School team this season.

Thus far, McPeak has been picked as a back on the All-Catholic and All-Scholastic teams. These teams are picked by the coaches and sports writers of Philadelphia.

All-Public team in a charity contest.

Recently, young McPeak was awarded the Maxwell Trophy for his achievement in football, and already has had several offers for scholarships in colleges. He is also an honor student in his studies.

Vincent McPeak, Sr., who is now employed at Fleetwings, played football with Fordham University.
